Music First

1. Introduction

The idea is to create a one stop subscription service for musicians to be able to distribute their music and bios to multiple websites at once. Instead of creating a log in for SoundCloud, apple music, Spotify, etc, they will create one profile, select how much music they want to be uploaded, and with the push of a button, their music and bio will be spread across those platforms.

This would be easy for musicians to manage where their music is going and having to pay a subscription fee for each website every month. This will make the process smoother for the artists and be able to reach more avenues in one spot.

The artists will also have a profile page where people can stream their music and book them directly from this site, without jumping through hoops to find the artists information.

2. Expected List of Features

- Artists biography -blog
- Listen to select tracks
- Booking button where venues can reach out to artists directly and eliminate the spam bots
- Artists submit form: One song, city/state, genre of music they consider themselves to be, and a picture of themselves along with a two-three sentence biography.
- All musical genre's welcome
- Country/States filter
- Request Form: Date of event, type of event, and compensation
- Consolidated subscription service for multiple music platforms
- 5% successful booking fee, 95% to the artists

3. Market Survey

1. Gigmor.com
2. bandmix.com
3. amuse.io
4. landr.com
5. musicgateway.com

- These websites are similar as far as being able to listen to artists music and book them. What will make mine different is that instead of the artists creating multiple accounts across different websites, we will do that heavy work for them so they can do what they do best, focus on the music.

I would need to learn a little more about the music business and licensing fees for the artists music. My site would not be a record label, it's just to help them spread their music across more platforms.
